Terms of service of the TRY File Archive (version 3.0, 2016-04-25)

The data are made available to the public and the scientific community in the belief that their wide dissemination will lead to greater understanding and new scientific insights and that global scientific problems require international cooperation.

Data download from the TRY File Archive is unrestricted - unless a restriction is posed on the individual dataset by the data owner - and requires only a free registration needed for web security reasons.

The TRY initiative is not responsible for the content of the datasets.

The scientists that decided to share these data rely on the ethics and integrity of the users. To assure that the data providers receive fair credit for their work, the TRY File Archive requires appropriate citation of

- reference to the publication (if existing), and

- reference to the data package.